Framing / Opening Questions	Building & Collapse Questions
“What part of the 9/11 story do you feel most certain about—and why?”	“How do you understand the way the buildings collapsed—does anything about it surprise you?”
“Have you ever looked at any alternative explanations, even just out of curiosity?”	“Why did Building 7 fall if it wasn’t hit by a plane?”
“What kind of evidence would make you question the official explanation?”	“Have you seen footage of the collapses from different angles, and what do you notice?”
	“Do you think fire alone has ever caused that type of structural failure before?”

Evidence & Materials	Investigation & Response
“What do you make of reports that unusual materials were found in the dust at Ground Zero?”	“Do you feel the 9/11 Commission answered all major questions?”
“How thoroughly do you think the debris was analyzed before it was removed?”	“Why do you think there was initial resistance to forming an independent investigation?”
“Why was so much of the steel shipped overseas so quickly?”	“Were all relevant witnesses and experts included in the investigation, in your opinion?”

Air Defense / Timeline	Intelligence & Foreknowledge
“How do you understand the timeline of the air defense response that morning?”	“What’s your understanding of the warnings or intelligence that existed before 9/11?”
“Do you think NORAD’s response time that day was consistent with prior incidents?”	“Do you think anything was missed—or ignored—in the lead-up?”
“What do you think caused the delays in intercepting the planes?”	“How should governments handle intelligence that isn’t fully confirmed?”

Media & Information	Critical Thinking / Big Picture
“How much do you trust the initial reporting compared to later investigations?”	“What’s the difference between questioning a narrative and denying an event happened?”
“Do you think media coverage shaped public perception early on?”	“How do you personally decide which sources are credible?”
“Have you compared mainstream reporting with independent investigations?”	“Why do you think people react strongly to this topic, even years later?”
